

TRAILERING A SAILBOAT with live-aboard amenities can open up a whole new world on the water; with serenity and economy.

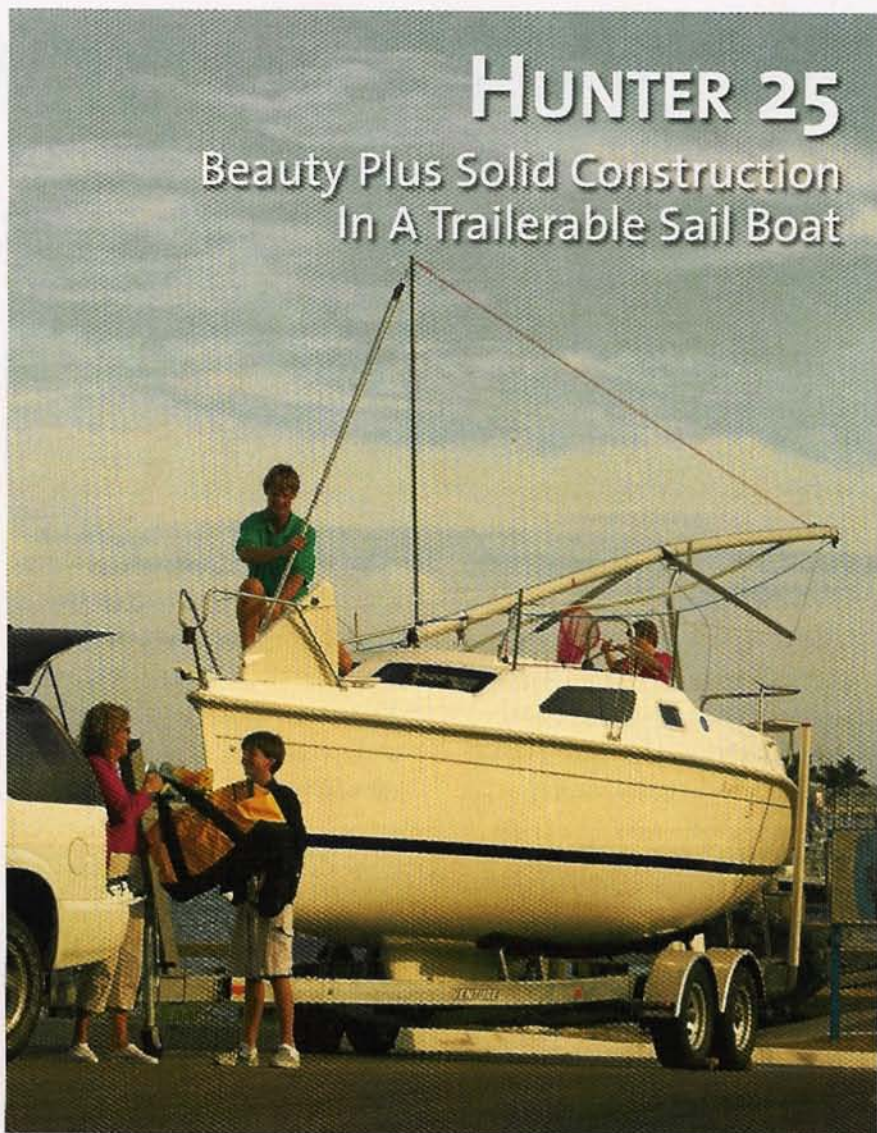

As a builder, Hunter continues to impress with its retooling and new designs and their new Hunter 25 is a perfect example of this commitment. Replacing the Hunter 240 and 260 models, they have added smoother deck lines and done a superb job below decks in this boat. In fact the first impression when you look at the trailerable 25-foot Hunter is the interior space and feel for a boat this size.

It has a remarkable amount of interior space and its layout is well down in the hull, allowing easy cruising comfort for what is classified as a trailerable yacht. Classified as a pocket cruiser, the Hunter 25 sleeps four adults and boasts a convenient compact galley and an optional enclosed head with hard privacy doors.

The forward V-berth sleeps two, with room for two more to sleep laterally in the berth aft behind the companionway ladder. Ventilation is more than adequate with a screened aft bunk hatch, and six other portholes. This also results in an exceptionally bright interior; another bonus.

It's nice too that Hunter has borrowed the style and feel of its bigger boats with some teak trim to add warmth. A functional teak dining table, galley sink with 10 gallon-capacity manual water system, portable single-burner stove and portable ice chest are standard equipment. And of course, a "Luxury Package" is available and includes Sunbrella™ interior cloth; accordion shades; 12-volt cooler; and a marine head with holding tank, all at a great value price. The cockpit is also well done, roomy and safe. The open transom is a nice touch and again we would opt for the optional teak chairs and wheel. A well-designed engine bracket allows for a 10 HP auxiliary engine. Another neat touch is the ease with which you can raise and lower the rudder, using a unique lever action that requires only eight pounds of force.

fiberglass weighing 1,300 pounds draws only two feet so it's easily launched and perfect for any favourite shallow water mooring. This feature contributes greatly to directional stability for sure.

For a boat this size a lot of thought has gone into the sail plan. The boat comes with an easy mast raising system, perfect for trailering and touring on some canal systems. The boat is stable and tracks well under most wind conditions; it can point well too. The large mainsail is perfectly balanced opposite the smaller jib. The fractional rig adds a good look to the boat as well as contributes to its solid sailing characteristics. We would strongly recommend that one consider the upgraded roller furling system which will add ease of handling when docking or mooring.

As a final touch the Hunter 25 comes with a galvanized dual-axle trailer system with a total towing weight of 4650 pounds.

This boat is perfect for anyone who wants to balance cruising and sailing performance in one package; we give it a 10 out of 10. ●
